BUILDING VEHICLE TUNNEL UNDER THE HUDSON RIVER

New York, April 13. (United Press)—Work on the $40,000,000 vehicular tunnel under the Hudson River is under way. Contracts call for completion in four years, including approaches.

The total length of the tunnel is 9,250 feet. The two tubes will have an hourly capacity in both directions of 3,800 vehicles. Each tube will have room for two automobiles abreast, and there will be a six-foot sidewalk.

The ventilation plan provides for changing the air forty times an hour and the projectors have no fear of gasoline fumes.

Each tube will have an outside diameter of twenty-nine feet six inches. The tubes will lie side by side.

The New York entrance will be at Broome and Varick Streets, and the exit at Canal and Varick. As it will be necessary to go under the Erie Railroad yards, the New Jersey ends will be further back from the river, the entrance at Provost and 12th Streets and the exits at Provost and 14th Streets.

Following data indicates the magnitude of the work: Length of tunnel, 9,250 feet; distance between portals, 3,330 feet; distance between river shafts, 3,375 feet; length of under river portion, 5,480 feet; two roadways, each twenty feet wide headroom thirteen feet six inches, estimated hourly capacity in both directions, 3,800 vehicles; estimated maximum daily capacity, 46,000 vehicles; maximum depth to top of tunnel below mean high water, seventy-two feet; maximum depth of roadway below mean high water, ninety-three feet.

Ground was broken for the first construction work March 31, 1922. The cost is being shared by the States of New York and New Jersey.

TWO MILLION DOLLARS DAMAGE DONE TO STANDARD OIL PLANT; WHITNEY, INDIANA; FIVE PEOPLE ARE SERIOUSLY INJURED

Whitney, Indiana, April 14.—Five were injured and $2,000,000 worth of property damage incurred today in an explosion and fire in the Standard Oil Company's plant here. The cause of the explosion is unknown. Ambulances from East Chicago, Indiana Harbor and other nearby towns were rushed to the scene and a search made in the wreckage for the bodies of other employees thought to have been caught by the explosion. A $2,000,000 explosion occurred here last July.

The explosion was first heard in Battery No. 4, Tube Stills. The blast was accompanied by bursts of flame. The tank was twenty feet high and twenty feet in diameter.

SOLDIER'S BONUS BILL MUST PASS BEFORE TARIFF IS DISPOSED OF SAYS M'CUMBER

Washington, D. C., April 14.—Senator McCumber, of the Senate Finance Committee, is determined that the soldier bonus bill shall be passed before the tariff is out of the way. Senator Watson, of Indiana, sometimes called the Administration's spokesman, says otherwise. That was the status of the bonus today when Finance Committee men prepared for an informal meeting on Monday. Watson says the soldier bonus bill will have to undergo some changes and that it is foolish to think that the bill can be jammed in ahead of the tariff.

PRESIDENT HARDING OUT FLATLY TODAY IN FAVOR OF NAVY OF 80,000 MEN

Washington, D. C. April 14.—President Harding today came out flatly in favor of a navy of 86,000 men and against the slash to 67,000, as provided by the House Appropriations Committee in the Naval Appropriations Bill. The President's action was taken in a letter to Representative Longworth, of Ohio. The text of the letter was kept a close secret but big navy advocates plan to spring it as a trump card against the little navy forces in the House debate late today or tomorrow.

WOMEN SURE ARE HARD TO UNDERSTAND

New York, April 14.—Mrs. Annie Glickstein, wife of Adam Glickstein, who was shot and killed by Mrs. Lillie Grazier today, jumped from a window in her mother's home and was killed. Just before her act she expressed fear that her husband's slayer would be released by the court, now that Olivia Stone got off.

Operators Figures On Earnings Set Out In Statement

NOTE:—Number of days worked and number of employees taken from Pennsylvania State Report.

* Estimated.

This table shows that men working during the year 1921 earned $9.56 for eight hours or about $1.20 per hour, while the rate for workmen in building state roads is only 30 cents an hour.

Mr. Shillingford said that if the coal consuming public were willing to pay $9.56 for eight hours work, the miners are right in this fight. If they believe that wages in the mining industry ought to be based upon a parity with wages in other industries, the operators are right.

The statement made by the representative of District No. 2, United Mine Workers of America, before the

Absenteeism-Tonnage Workers 17.6% Day Men 8.8%

Labor Committee of the House of Representatives, that $760 was the annual earnings of miners in this District last year, is absolutely untrue and the witness admitted on the stand that this figure did not include wages paid for day labor, which is 35% of the total cost, cutting and scraping, pushing cars, yardage and deadwork or extra pay for deficiencies.

On the matter of intermittency of employment, Mr. Shillingford said: The principal reason given by the United Mine Workers of America for the maintenance of the war-wage scale and their demand for a six hour day and a five day week, is intermittency and absorbed by the mines that had made the necessary wage adjustments. It is an admitted fact that the coal mining industry is overdeveloped and over-manned. The question of overdevelopment is a matter of individual investment and the exercise of the American right to enter into any legitimate business which the operation of natural economic laws will adjust.

The excess number of men employed in the mining industry is due in a large measure to the very high wages paid in the coal mines of the country as compared with the wages paid in other industry employing such a large percentage of common labor, thereby attracting men to the industry.

In 1920 the maximum production of coal loads in one day was 45-47. The average maintained for the year was 33,091 car loads, based on 300 working days in the year. If the maximum production of one day's capacity, 45,457 had been maintained we would have produced over 740,000,000 tons of bituminous coal, and the actual possible production of bituminous coal in the United States, so far as development and equipment are concerned, is in the neighborhood of 750,000,000 tons of coal. Man power is ca-

public of 675,000,000 tons based upon performance of October, 1919. Present transportation facilities, however limit this to less than 600,000,000 tons. This is agreed to by many men who have made a study of the industry. Intermittency of employment in the coal mining industry cannot be eliminated by maintaining a wage rate so high that men can make as much money as in other industries in one half the number of working days. It is an economic fallacy to insist upon intermittency of employment in the bituminous coal mining industry as a reason for extra high wage rates. The requirement is for coal mining wage rates to be based upon the factors that rightfully should enter into the employment of men in any industry, that is the skill required, the hazard, the health risk, general living conditions in and around the plant, and the advantages or lack of advantages offered to the worker's family, etc., in comparison with like things in other and kindred industries. If these factors are balanced with other and kindred industries, the coal mining industry will be put out of the class of competitively bidding for men and attracting them from other

BANDITS CONTINUE OPERATING IN BOTH EASTERN AND WESTERN CITIES

New York, N. Y., April 14.—Yeggmen today crossed the dead line proscribed by the New York police and blew open a safe in a down town office building. The watchman was tied up in a sack and thrown into a corner while the gang looted the safe. The robbers then went to the Royal Insurance building, going from office to office looting the desks and safes.

New York, April 14.—George Bainbridge, night watchman of the Royal Insurance Building, who was found bound and gagged early today, apparently by bandits who looted safes in the building of more than $50,000, confessed to the police that he had aided the robbers. Yeggs operating in co-operation with the watchman worked the big office building below the dead line established by the police and secured considerable loot from safes and desks.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 14.—Three bandits today held up the Max Kurgan jewelry store here and escaped with loot valued at $150,000. Two of the robbers covered clerks with revolvers while the third looted the safe which was unlocked.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 14.—The trout season will open tomorrow in Pennsylvania and it will be one of the best in years, according to Nathan R. Buller, Commissioner of Fisheries. The waters of the State are in good condition and many of the trout streams have been restocked during the last few years.

"DRY NAVY" CAPTURES BRITISH SCHOONER WITH LARGE CARGO OF WHISKEY ON BOARD

New York, N. Y., April 14.—A British schooner was overhauled and seized by a police motor boat patrol in the bay off 69th Street today. Twenty-five barrels of rye whiskey and hundreds of bottles of Scotch were on board. Although sailing under an assumed name "Schooner Red," the vessel proved to be the "W. T. Dodd," of British registry, from Nassau. Its Captain, Herman Hadley, said he was bound for St. Pierre, Canada.

ATTORNEY GENERAL DAUGHERTY REPORTS ENCOURAGING DEVELOPMENTS IN STRIKE

Washington, D. C. April 14.—Encouraging developments in the coal strike situation were reported to President Harding today by Attorney General Daugherty. There are indications that efforts are being made in the various fields to get the miners and operators together for a settlement, Daugherty said, after a lengthy conference with the President. While he could report no really concrete action looking toward a settlement, he feels that encouraging progress is being made.

FIVE LIVES LOST WHEN SCHOONER GOES TO BOTTOM OF POTOMAC RIVER IN GALE

Alexandria, Va., April 14.—Five lives were lost when the forty ton schooner "S. C. Kemble" sank in a gale in the Potomac river one mile below here today. Mrs. Gertrude Lawrence, aged 45, wife of the captain of the vessel, and her four children, ranging in age from seven to sixteen, were trapped in the cabin and went down with the vessel. Captain Lawrence and his fourteen year old son Carroll saved themselves by clinging to the rigging.

industries. The mines in the United States when just sufficiently manned to retain the requirements of this country, which have never exceeded 579,000,000 tons, would work as regularly so far as number of days is concerned as any other basic industry, because bituminous coal mining follows closely and accurately the conditions existing in all other industries. The bituminous coal mining industry, if properly balanced, must necessarily work the average number of "coal consumption days" worked in all other industries because it supplies all other industries with a basic commodity, fuel.

Though coal mining is hazardous, it is not unpleasant, instead it is an agreeable occupation. Coal mines today are better ventilated than large city office buildings. Sixty-four per cent of the men employed in Central Pennsylvania mines are contract miners and are, to all practical intent and purpose, their own "bosses." They have and exercise the freedom of coming to work at their own will, leaving their places of work when they desire, lying idle on any day they wish and are practically master in their own working place. In no other large industry is this great amount of freedom enjoyed by the workmen. This is a reason why men like coal mining and persist in remaining coal miners in the face of intermittency of employment. Another important reason is that in other industries when business depression occurs, the usual procedure is to lay off or furlough these workmen who are not necessary to produce the decreased output and these employees are forced to secure work in other plants or other industries, or take their places in the ranks of the unemployed, while in the mining industry this condition does not obtain. If a mine has only 50 per cent orders, instead of laying off 50 per cent of its men and running six days a week, the 100 per cent employees work 50 per cent time, or three days in the week. If it is only a half time operation in the mining industry, all those engaged in that industry are permitted to earn the "half loaf" which is considered better than none. In addition the mining industry at such times is willing and is forced to give work to many of the men out of employment in other lines of industry. In our own district during the year 1921, when other large industries laid off thousands of men, hundreds of these unemployed found their way into the different coal mines and took their share of whatever work was to be had at the particular mine where they found employment. This condition of selfishness in the mining industry is one of its bright spots. The operators do not wish to change it, and the mine workers would not permit it to be changed. This fact, also, let us add, is not known by the general public and has never been recognized by short sighted labor leaders. Mine workers may be employed part time, but the only miners totally unemployed are those located where the mines in the community are totally idle and they are unable to move to some other town where a mine or mines are in operation. Such cases are the exception to the rule.

The miners are asking the public to subsidize them by paying them as much wages for 150 working days in the year as is paid to the workers of other and kindred industries for 300 days' work. The public must not be asked to pay the inflated cost due to such a fallacious method of determining wages. When wage rates in the bituminous coal mining field are based upon the proper factors and have found a proper relationship to the wages in other industries, the excess number of men in the mining district will be depleted by the operation of economic law, which is the proper way to bring on this condition.

Intermittency in the mining industry could be reduced and practically eliminated by the ruthless exercise of the right to reduce the working force in proportion to diminishing production as it is exercised in other industries.

Cats Once Worshipped.

After the Romans conquered Egypt, they, with their usual sagacity, tolerated cat love or worship. Diodorus tells the story of a mob tearing a Roman soldier "to pieces" because he had accidentally slain a cat. An office of keeper of cats was hereditary. The Turks adopted Fella domestication. In Cairo homeless cats were fed by order of the kadin. According to Lane, the translator of the Arabian Nights, the Sultan Ez-Zahir Heybars, founded a home for cats in a garden near his mosque.

Light Without Heat.

One of the things which inventors would like much to accomplish is the production of light without heat. Nature proves by the example of the firefly and the glowworm that the thing can be done. Experiments made abroad have shown what had long been believed without direct measurement of the temperature that the light radiated from a Geissler tube, when an electric current passes through it, is accompanied by very little heat. This accords with the view that we must look to electricity for a solution of the problem of "cold light."

Patagonia.

Patagonia consists of the territories of Rio Negro, Chubut and Santa Cruz in Argentina. Formerly Patagonia was applied to the whole southern portion of South America. The name may be derived from the Spanish word patagon, meaning a large foot, alluding to the footprints found by early explorers, or it may come from the Quichua word patacuna meaning terraces.

What He Would Do.

Being told by the deacon that his constant demands for money from the pulpit would kill his church, an old colored preacher replied, "Churches don't die that way, brother. You show me one that did an' I'll shout with a voice of thunder, 'Blessed am the dead that die in the Lord!'"—Boston Transcript.

Don't Throw Away Corks.

Often a cork is the handiest thing to have around and yet the hardest to find. This in spite of the fact that you pull many corks out of bottles in a week's time. A small box, labeled corks, will come in handy if you put these pulled out corks in it and find a place for it on the pantry shelf.

The National Security League is making plans for the fitting celebration of the 100th anniversary of Gen. Grant's birth, which falls on April 27. The Grant centenary serves to recall a visit General Grant made to our neighboring county of Elk, just across the Clearfield county line, where he was royally entertained by some Elk county friends on a deer hunting expedition. The General spent several days at a hunting camp where much shooting and popping occurred—in the camp. When the party was about to break up some fellow discovered that the President of the United States had not had much success thus far as a deer hunter, in fact hadn't seen a deer yet, and remembering that a farmer named English, living nearby, had a tame buck deer, heeled it out of the camp, purchased the deer and had it taken to the vicinity of the camp, where it was suddenly driven out of the brush along the road in front of the hero of Appomattox and General Grant brought it down with a well-directed rifle shot. The village near which the President camped was named Grant after its distinguished visitor. It is located handy to Dent's Run.

W. O. Altman, famous weather prognosticator, hunter and trapper, has written a letter from his home in the wildwoods near Westline to a friend in Kane in which he warns folks in this section to keep close to overcoats for they are liable to need them all summer. It is going to be the coldest summer since 1879 and from April 15 to August, he says look for rain, snow and cold winds. He says his reckonings from March 21, 22 and 23.

"Mother's Day" will soon be at hand, and those in touch with the movement in the cities advise against the wearing of the accustomed carnation, because they say, the florists are profiteering and boost the price of flowers on that day out of all reason. It was ever thus.

Couldn't Stand That.

When I was a youngster we lived on a farm, and as my parents were devout church members the preachers and their families were always welcome to come at any time. I had quite a case on the preacher's youngest son, a lad of ten years. One day they all drove into the yard just as dinner was ready. Well, my brothers and I had to "wait" while the preacher's family ate dinner with the older folks. And I hungrily watched my young love eat six plates of chicken—and there was none left for us. That cured me.—Exchange.

Paris an Ancient City.

The name Paris as applied to the town first occurred in a synodal letter convening a council there in A. D. 300. The city is first mentioned in history under the name of Lutetia by Julius Caesar in 53 B. C., when he appointed it as the meeting place of deputies from conquered Gaul. It was then the fourth capital of the Parisii, an insignificant Gallic tribe.

"Ethel," said the bishop, "you seem to be a bright little girl; can you repeat a verse from the Bible?" "I'll say I can." "Well, my dear, let us have it." "The Lord is my shepherd—I should worry."—Florida Times-Union.

"I expect all my friends will be angels some day," said Uncle Eben, "but before dey undertakes to play de harp I hopes de mos' of 'em will have a chance to take music lessons."

When Loafer Becomes a Pest.

"A loafer," said Uncle Eben, "don't do no special harm, cep' when he tries to be mistook for a worker an' insinuates on gettin' in de way."

Poverty Sometimes Beneficial.

Poverty is uncomfortable, as I myself can testify; but some times out of ten the best thing that can happen to a young man is to be tossed overboard and compelled to sink or swim for himself.—James A. Gardfield.

WILSON AND TUMULTY AT LOGGERHEADS OVER MESSAGE WOODROW NOW DISCLAIMS

Washington, D. C., April 14.—Woodrow Wilson and his former secretary and devoted friend Joseph P. Tumulty, have come to a parting of the ways over Wilson's repudiation of the now famous message delivered by Tumulty to the Jeffersonian banquet in New York last week. The big question in political circles today is whether Wilson in the near future will regret his curt letter disowning the message and take public steps to restore their long standing friendship. Tumulty declared today that he intended to do something more about the matter but his friends say Wilson will not permit the misunderstanding to continue.

Gipsies in History.

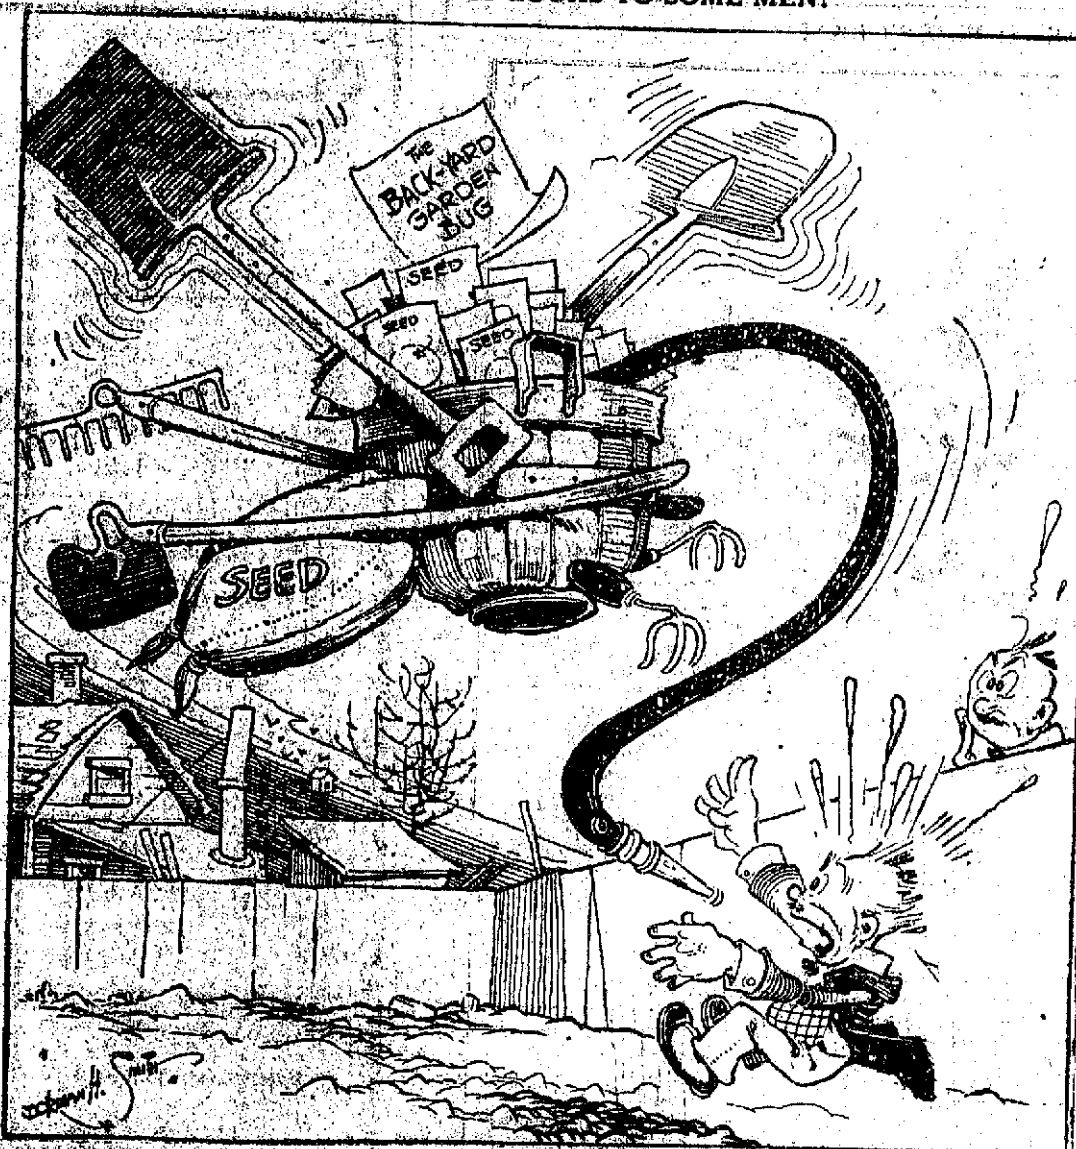

The original gipsies appeared in Europe at about the beginning of the sixteenth century. It is probable that they were of Indian origin and were either exiled because of their religious beliefs or ran away from the persecution of Timur, the great conqueror who invaded India. As their origin was a mystery to Europe when they appeared on its Eastern plains, some German savant decreed that they were Egyptians. The popular corruption of the word "Egyptian" is the name by which they are now known the world over.

THAT LITTLE
EASTER GIFT

Easter has come to be a fine time for gift giving and you'll be glad to know that we have always those little gifts that you'd like to make. It isn't a hard task to make selections here at any time.

Art and Free Will.
Determinism robs art of its fundamental right to exist—or its autonomous expression. It sweeps individual into the crowd and makes the crowd subservient to inflexible forces. It overlooks man's consciousness of his place in the universe; forgets his temperamental preferences and reduces him to a mechanism through which blind life operates as best it can do to do credit. It takes no heed of the teleology which gives art its glorious significance, its imperishable beauty. —Thomas G. Craven, in the Mail.

Get Salt From the Ocean.
Guam has no salt deposits unless the great Pacific ocean which surrounds it can be called upon. All the salt consumed in the island is evaporated from sea water in kettles in the great factories employed by the natives of all the great countries and islands. When a "boiling" is in progress the natives take occasion to produce a quantity of sugar as well as salt, the sugar being derived from evaporating the sap from the coconut tree.

Daily Thought.

Original "Bill of Health."
A bill of health is a certificate issued to the master of a vessel when clearing from a port. When no disease of an infectious nature exists in the port, the bill is known as a clean bill of health; if infectious disease is suspected or there is possibility of such, it is called a suspected bill, while in case of such disease existing it is known as a foul bill. The expression "clean bill of health" is often applied to individuals, who, after a physical examination, are found in perfect health.

Couldn't Stand That.
When I was a youngster we lived on a farm, and as my parents were devout church members the preachers and their families were always welcome to come at any time. I had quite a case on the preacher's young son, a lad of ten years. One day they came into the yard just as dinner was ready. Well, my brothers and I had to wait while the preacher's family ate dinner with the older folks. And I hungrily watched my young love eat six pieces of chicken—and there was none left for us. That cured me.—Exchange.

MISS CLARA LEAVY PASSES AWAY

Clara Leavy daughter of Mrs. E. A. Leavy of Second Street passed away at the Clearfield Hospital about 9 o'clock last evening following an illness of three weeks. Miss Clara suffered an attack of the flu about three weeks ago and was apparently on the road to recovery when she was taken seriously ill and was removed to the Clearfield Hospital for treatment. Her ailment was found to be tubercular meningitis and while medical skill was able to stay the ravages of the disease for a brief while her weakened vitality was unequal to the struggle and the end came as above stated.

The deceased was the daughter of the late Edward A. and Louise Helsey Leavy and was born in Clearfield, on January 17, 1885. Her entire life was spent in Clearfield where she endeavored herself by her sweet, lovable character and disposition to a wide circle of friends. She was not strong physically, but she was a very kind and her disposition was very kind and accented, draw out and develop her many graces. An uncomplaining sufferer at all times, her trials accepted with true christian fortitude, she endeavored by every self sacrificing effort to bring joy and comfort into the hearts of those she loved, and as a result was idolized in her home. Her death in the springtime of life, with everything to live for, is a heart-crushing blow to her mother and sisters, who have in their sorrow, the heartfelt sympathy of all who had the pleasure of this splendid young woman's acquaintance.

The deceased was a lifelong and earnestly devoted member of the Trinity Methodist church and took a great interest in the activities of her church. She is survived by her mother, three sisters, Mrs. John Ginery and Misses Anna and Sarah, all of Clearfield.

The funeral will be held from the Leavy home Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The services will be conducted by Rev. Horace L. Jacobs of the Trinity Church and interment will be made in Hillcrest Cemetery.

The stork visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gray this morning at 9:12 and left a big eight-pound baby boy, which has been named Robert, Jr. Mother and son doing fine.

HOW many times in a day do people rub their eyes and say, "Golly I've had kind of a headache all afternoon" and then proceed to take a dose of something. They never think their eyes have anything to do with it.

When your eyes smart and burn, they need attention. A slight correction may relieve the strain.

Infection and Contagion.
Infecting is the spread of disease through the air, through water or some other distant means. In pathology, infection means the communication of disease as by entrance of pathogenic germs into an organism in any manner; distinguished from contagion, in which direct or indirect contact with a diseased individual is implied. Contagion means the communication of disease from person to person by contact with the body of a diseased person.

Effective Meth Protection.
Chests made of red cedar are ample protection against the operations of the moth. The government says so in a report which comes from the agricultural department. These chests must be secure and tight in every respect. Since it is the odor of the red cedar which kills the young moths, care must be taken to prevent the escape of the odor. This is accomplished by seeing that the joints are all tight, and when there is occasion to open the chest the interior must not be exposed any longer than is absolutely necessary.

Round Chimneys Best.

A round chimney, while not so easy to build as a square one, has decided advantages over the latter, says the Scientific American. It greatly lessens the friction between the walls of the chimney and the rising gases, and has the smallest wall surfaces in proportion to the cross area. The efficiency of a round chimney 24 inches in diameter is almost as great as that of a square chimney 24 inches across.

Keeps Silver Bright.

In order to keep silver that is not in constant use in a good condition fill a paper with alternate layers of forks, spoons and other objects and common flour that is perfectly dry. If the silver is bright and dry when you put it away it may be used at any time without being cleaned for a year or two. After this time the flour needs drying again. This plan saves a great deal of cleaning.

We Want You To Know The Facts

A Statement By The Association of Bituminous Coal Operators of Central Pennsylvania

Hurling invectives at the coal operators of the United States seems to be a popular pastime with the officials of the United Mine Workers of America and its partisans. Ellis Searles, editor of the United Mine Workers' Journal, writing in the Saturday Evening Post of the issue of April 1st in an article entitled "The Coal Miners' Case," starts his decidedly partisan explanation of the strike and its causes with this paragraph:

"Members of the United Mine Workers of America were unable to understand the amazing action of the bituminous coal operators in refusing to meet with them in joint conference for the purpose of negotiating a new wage agreement to take the place of the agreement that expired on March 31, this year. The operators were in honor bound to meet with the miners, and their refusal to meet was a direct, flagrant violation of the solemn agreement, which miners and operators, by command of the government, signed in New York on March 31, 1920. Not all of the operators were guilty of this violation, however. The refusal to meet with the miners was confined to that element among the operators that appears to be determined to destroy the coal miners' union if possible, or at least to weaken its protective influence."

Mr. Searles in the final sentence of the above paragraph gives the union operators of District No. 2 a clean bill of health, but what about the members of the U. M. W. of A. of District No. 2? The union operators of this district invited the miners' representatives to a wage conference and that invitation was firmly refused despite a custom of over 20 years' standing that brought the union miners and operators of District No. 2 into conference prior to the expiration of each scale agreement for the formation and adoption of a new scale. And furthermore in direct violation of their contract the miners of this district quit work April 1st when their wage agreement of April 26, 1920, bound them to continue work for a period of 30 days after the first meeting of operators and miners for the purpose of negotiating a new wage agreement.

Is Mr. Searles able to understand "the amazing action" of the U. M. W. of A. of District No. 2? Does the violation of 22 years' precedent by the U. M. W. of A. of this district in refusing to meet the operators to discuss a new wage agreement, and their strike in direct violation of their contract strike Mr. Searles as a "direct flagrant violation of the solemn agreement" which miners and operators of District No. 2 entered into on April 26, 1920?

If in the paragraph from Mr. Searles' article, reprinted above, "Members of the Operators' Association of District No. 2" were substituted where "Members of the United Mine Workers of America" appears and the word "operators" for "miners" placed throughout the remainder of the paragraph a clear-cut presentation of the situation in this district would be presented.

Mr. John L. Lewis, President of the international body, United Mine Workers of America, recently appeared before the Labor Committee of the lower house of Congress and, after reading a clause in the agreement which expired March 31st, which pledged the operators of the Central Competitive Field to a joint conference with the miners, said in part:

"It was a pledge as morally binding as any bond or promissory note ever executed in a business transaction. The mine workers believed the coal operators signed the agreement in good faith. But now we find that they contumaciously refused to live up to their agreement. They have refused point blank to do as they agreed to do. If they were to refuse to liquidate their financial obligations it would be no more dishonorable than their refusal to keep their solemn agreement with the mine workers."

If Mr. Lewis so regards the action of the operators of the Central Competitive Field, of which District No. 2 is not a part, should he not hold the same views of the U. M. W. of A., District No. 2? The pledge of the miners' organization in this district to keep its members at work 30 days after the initial meeting of operators and miners for the consideration of a new scale agreement was "a pledge as morally binding as any bond or promissory note ever executed in a business transaction." The operators of this district asked the miners' scale committee to meet them in joint conference as they had for 23 years past. The refusal of the miners was "point blank." Does Mr. Lewis condone in the U. M. W. of A. in District No. 2, the same actions for which he condemns in extravagant language a few of the operators of the Central Competitive Field?

The refusal of the miners' organization in this field to meet with us in joint conference to formulate and adopt a new wage agreement to supplement that which expired March 31, 1922; the fact that non-union operators with whom we must compete in the open market have reduced wages to almost a pre-war level, whose prices we must meet or get out of business, and whose prices we must meet to give the miner his fair share of work days, has compelled us to formulate the following offer or scale of wages, which was posted at the mines of the members of this association, April 1, 1922, and effective on that date:

Safety in Front.
The late long-staple cotton crop has made quite a lot of money for South Carolina negroes. A short time ago one of them purchased a high-priced car. A few days later he went back to the salesman. "Cap, is you got any of dese here cow-ketchers?" he inquired. "Do you mean buxipers, Charlie?" "Yassir." "Well, Charlie, do you want one for both ends of your car?" "Nawstr, cap, ahnt nobody gwine ter ketch up wid me. Ahf Ias want one for de front."

Gold and Silver in Coal.
In the Catubria coal field of Wyoming small quantities of gold and silver are said to be present in the coal veins. In South Africa a similar occurrence has been noted, the coal occurring in seams running through the quartzite ore.

Restaurant French.
Lapped on a lunch bill of fare by T. M. C.—"Horseshoe d'oeuvre." This reminds us of the story of the young man in New York who was dining in a first-class restaurant with his best beloved. Walking.
If a man is walking, it is the first principle of philosophy to say that he is not walking, the first principle of science to say that he is placing one foot before the other and bringing the hinder one in turn to the fore, the first principle of art to say that the man is more than walking, he is yearning; then there are times when scientist, philosopher and poet all discover of a sudden that by heavens! the man is walking and none other.—Kenneth Burke, in the Dial.

Costly Debauch.
One of the calamities of medieval England was directly due to over-indulgence in liquor. Henry's son and heir, William, was to sail from France on the White Ship. The Norman sailors got drunk just before they started for England, and the vessel was lost with all on board. It was a costly debauch, for by removing Henry's only male heir it opened the way for a civil war over the succession when he was no more.

Light Without Heat.
One of the things which inventors would like much to accomplish is the production of light without heat. Nature proves by the example of the firefly and the glowworm that the thing can be done. Experiments made abroad have shown what had long been believed without direct measurement of the temperature that the light radiated from a Geissler tube, when an electric current passes through it, is accompanied by very little heat. This accords with the view that we must look to electricity for a solution of the problem of "cold light."

A Reflection.
Fortune will hardly give us money when we spend so much time thinking of what we wouldn't do for people if we were rich.

getting at him any worse than it already had, and as we were taking him out the blanket slipped aside from his face and I saw who it was that the master-mechanic had risked his life

for. It was Hatch, himself, and he died in our arms, the major's and mine, while we were carrying him out to where Mrs. Sheila was tearing one of the Pullman sheets that I had got hold of into strips to make bandages for the wounded.

With the chance of saving maybe another one or two, we couldn't stay to help the brave little woman who was trying to be doctor and nurse to half a dozen poor wretches at once. But she took time to ask me one single breathless question:

"Have they found him yet?—you know the one I mean, Jimmie?"

"No," I said. "They're digging away at that side now," and then I ran back to jump in again.

Though the fire was now licking at everything in sight, Kirgan, who had taken the ax from our fireman, had managed to cut some of the car timbers out of the way so that we could see down into the tangle of things where the cab of the 416 ought to have been. There wasn't much left of the cab. The water-gauge was broken, along with everything else, but in spite of the reek of smoke and steam we could see that Hogan and his fireman were not there. But down under the coal that had shifted forward at the impact of the collision we could make out the other man—the murderer—lying on his back, black in the face and gasping.

That was enough for the boss. It looked like certain death for anybody to crawl down into that hissing steam-bath, but he did it, wriggling through the hole that Kirgan had chopped, while two or three of us ran to the little creek that trickled down on the far side of the "Y" and brought back soaking Pullman blankets to try to delay the encroaching fire and smother the steam-jets.

I couldn't see very well what the boss was doing; the smoke and steam were so blinding. But when I did get a glimpse I saw that he was digging frantically with his bare hands at the shifted coal, and that he had succeeded in freeing the head and shoulders of the buried man, who was still alive enough to choke and gasp in the furnace-like heat.

Kirgan stood at as long as he could—until the licking flames were about to drive us all away.

"You'll be burnt alive—come up out of that!" he yelled to the boss; but I knew it wouldn't do any good. With Collingwood still buried down there and still with the breath of life in him, the boss was going to stay and keep on trying to dig him out, even if he, himself, got burned to a crisp doing it. Loving Mrs. Sheila the way he did, he couldn't do any less.

It was awful, those next two or three minutes. We were all running frantically back and forth, now, between the wreck and the creek, soaking the blankets and doing our level best to beat the fire back and keep it from cutting off the only way there was for the boss to climb out. But we could only fight gaspingly on the surface of things, as you might say. Down underneath, the fire was working around in front and behind in spite of all we could do. Some of it had got to the coal, and the heavy sulphurous smoke was oozing up to make us all choke and strangle.

Honestly, you couldn't have told that the boss was a white man when he crawled up out of that pit of death, tugging and lifting the crushed and broken body of the madman, and making us take it before he would come out himself. We got them both away from the fire as quickly as we could and around to the other side of things, Kirgan and Jones carrying

Collingwood.

The poor little lady we had left alone with the rescued ones had done all she could, and she was waiting for us. When we put Collingwood down, she sat down on the ground and took his head in her lap and cried over him just like his mother might have, and when the boss knelt down beside her I heard what he said: "That's right, little woman; that's just as it should be. Death wipes out all scores. I did my best—you must always believe that I did my best."

She choked again at that, and said: "There is no hope?" and he said: "I'm afraid not. He was dying when I got to him."

I tried to swallow the big lump in my throat and turned away, and so did everybody else but the major, who went around and knelt down on the other side of Mrs. Sheila. The wreck was blazing now like a mighty bonfire, lighting up the pine-clad hills all around and snapping and growling like some savage monster glouglouing over its prey. In the red glow we saw a man limping up the track from the west, and Kirgan and I went to meet him. It was Hogan, the missing engineer of the 416.

He told us what there was to tell, which wasn't very different from the way we'd been putting it up. They—Hogan and his fireman—hadn't suspected that they were carrying a maniac until after they had passed Bauxite and Collingwood had told them both that what he wanted to do was to overtake the special and smash it. Then there had been a fight on the engine, but Collingwood had a gun and he had threatened to kill them both if they didn't keep on.

"I kept her going," said the Irishman, "thinkin' maybe Jones'd keep out of my way, or that at the last I'd get a chance to shut the 'Sixteen off an' give her the brake. He kept me from doin' it, and when I saw the tail-lights, I pushed Johnnie Shovel off an' went after him because there was nawthin' else to do. Johnnie's back yowled a piece, with a broken leg."

Just then Jones, the special's engineer, came up, and he placed out Hogan's story. The wire to Bauxite had warned him that a crazy man was chasing him, and overrunning stop-signals. He had thought to side-track the chaser at the old "Y" and that was what he had stopped for.

Thereupon the three of us went after the crippled fireman, and when we got back to the "Y" with him it was all over. Collingwood had died with his head in Mrs. Sheila's lap, and the boss, fagged out and half dead as he must have been, was up and at work, getting the wreck victims into our day coach, which had been backed up and taken around to the other leg of the "Y" to head for Port City.

When it came time for us to move Collingwood, Mrs. Sheila pulled her veil down and walked behind the body, with the good old major locking his arm in hers, and that choking lump came again in my throat when I remembered what Collingwood had said to the boss the night he came to our office: "Sheila made her wedding journey with me once, when she was just eighteen. The next time she rides with me it will be at my funeral."

I guess there's no use stretching the agony out by telling about that mournful ride back to Port City with the dead and wounded. We left the wreck blazing and roaring in the shut-in valley at the gulch's mouth because there wasn't anything else to do; Kirgan and Jones and one of the firemen handled the engine and pulled out, while the rest of us rode in the day-coach and did what we could for the suffering.

At Banta we made a stop long enough to let the boss send a wire to Port City, turning out the doctors and the ambulances—and the undertakers; and though it was after three o'clock in the morning when we pulled in, it seemed as if the whole town had got the word and was down at the station to meet us.

I couldn't see Mrs. Sheila's face when the major helped her off at the platform; her veil was still down. But I did hear her low-spoken words to the boss, whispered while they were carrying Collingwood and Hatch, and two of the others, who were past help, out to the waiting string of dead-wagons.

"I shall go east with the body tomorrow—today, I mean—if the strikers will let you run a train, and Cousin Basil will go with me. We may never meet again, Graham, and for that reason I must say what I have to say now. Your opportunity has come. The man who could do the most to defeat you is dead, and the strike will do the rest. If I were you, I should neither eat nor sleep until I had thought of some way to take the railroad out of the hands of those who have proved that they are not worthy to own it."

I didn't know, just then, how much or little attention Mr. Norcross was paying to this mighty good, clear-headed bit of business advice. What he said went back to that saying of hers that they might never meet again.

"We must meet again—sometime and somewhere," he said. And then: "I did my best; God knows I did my best, Sheila. I would have given my own life gladly if the giving would have saved Collingwood's. Don't you believe that?"

"I shall always believe that you are one of God's own gentlemen, Graham," she said, soft and low, and then the major came to take her away.

Horse Racing 900 Years Ago.
Horse racing in England is said to have been first established at Chester in the year 1000.

Londoners Go to Bed Early.

How early we go to bed in London is shown by a census of underground passengers. The last trains in various directions carried respectively 45, 18, 19 and 25 passengers. So hard are our war habits to cast off. But, indeed, 10 o'clock was bedtime for a multitude of Londoners even before the war, and in that multitude were, and are, quite a number of prominent business men. Your professional man seems to sit up later, and fashion, naturally, rarely retires till dawn.—London Times Weekly.

Part of Time's Heritage.

Somewhere Shelley's line in "Adonais" about one whose name was writ in water comes to mind while reading the announcement that a fossil brownstone slab bearing the imprint of raindrops has been presented to the geological museum of Trinity college. This was a ruin that occurred thousands and thousands of years ago, and yet the marks of it are still to be seen. Like the lascious, ever-vital personality of John Keats, these raindrops have become part of the heritage of Time.—Christian Science Monitor.

That Small Eoy.

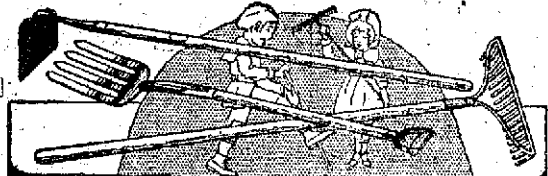

Just as the train was about to start, a very stout man struggled into a carriage and sank into a seat, breathing heavily. A small boy who sat opposite appeared to be fascinated. His ardent gaze eventually began to annoy the fat man, who demanded angrily: "What are you staring at me for?" "Please, sir," replied the lad, "there's nowhere else to look."—York Post.

"What kind of people are those who have just moved in next door to you?" asked Mrs. Gadder. "Oh, I never talk about my neighbors," replied Mrs. Herdson. "All I know about them is that their stuff came in one load, that only one of the bedsteads has any brass on it, most of the furniture looks old, there's six in the family, the children are all boys, they have two dogs, the man is about twenty years older than the woman, they had a squabble with the driver of the van when they settled with him and their name is Smith."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

BUILDING VEHICLE TUNNEL UNDER THE HUDSON RIVER

New York, April 13. (United Press)—Work on the $40,000,000 vehicular tunnel under the Hudson River is under way. Contracts call for completion in four years, including approaches.

The total length of the tunnel is 9,250 feet. The two tubes will have an hourly capacity in both directions of 3,800 vehicles. Each tube will have room for two automobiles abreast, and there will be a six-foot sidewalk.

The ventilation plan provides for changing the air forty times an hour and the projectors have no fear of gasoline fumes.

Each tube will have an outside diameter of twenty-nine feet six inches. The tubes will lie side by side.

The New York entrance will be at Broome and Varick Streets, and the exit at Canal and Varick. As it will be necessary to go under the Erie Railroad yards, the New Jersey ends will be further back from the river, the entrance at Provost and 12th Streets and the exits at Provost and 14th Streets.

Following data indicates the magnitude of the work: Length of tunnel, 9,250 feet; distance between portals, 3,330 feet; distance between river shafts, 3,375 feet; length of under river portion, 5,480 feet; two roadways, each twenty feet wide headroom thirteen feet six inches, estimated hourly capacity in both directions, 3,800 vehicles; estimated maximum daily capacity, 46,000 vehicles; maximum depth to top of tunnel below mean high water, seventy-two feet; maximum depth of roadway below mean high water, ninety-three feet.

Ground was broken for the first construction work March 31, 1922. The cost is being shared by the States of New York and New Jersey.

TWO MILLION DOLLARS DAMAGE DONE TO STANDARD OIL PLANT; WHITNEY, INDIANA; FIVE PEOPLE ARE SERIOUSLY INJURED

Whitney, Indiana, April 14.—Five were injured and $2,000,000 worth of property damage incurred today in an explosion and fire in the Standard Oil Company's plant here. The cause of the explosion is unknown. Ambulances from East Chicago, Indiana Harbor and other nearby towns were rushed to the scene and a search made in the wreckage for the bodies of other employees thought to have been caught by the explosion. A $2,000,000 explosion occurred here last July.

The explosion was first heard in Battery No. 4, Tube Stills. The blast was accompanied by bursts of flame. The tank was twenty feet high and twenty feet in diameter.

SOLDIER'S BONUS BILL MUST PASS BEFORE TARIFF IS DISPOSED OF SAYS M'CUMBER

Washington, D. C., April 14.—Senator McCumber, of the Senate Finance Committee, is determined that the soldier bonus bill shall be passed before the tariff is out of the way. Senator Watson, of Indiana, sometimes called the Administration's spokesman, says otherwise. That was the status of the bonus today when Finance Committee men prepared for an informal meeting on Monday. Watson says the soldier bonus bill will have to undergo some changes and that it is foolish to think that the bill can be jammed in ahead of the tariff.

PRESIDENT HARDING OUT FLATLY TODAY IN FAVOR OF NAVY OF 80,000 MEN

Washington, D. C. April 14.—President Harding today came out flatly in favor of a navy of 86,000 men and against the slash to 67,000, as provided by the House Appropriations Committee in the Naval Appropriations Bill. The President's action was taken in a letter to Representative Longworth, of Ohio. The text of the letter was kept a close secret but big navy advocates plan to spring it as a trump card against the little navy forces in the House debate late today or tomorrow.

Operators Figures On Earnings Set Out In Statement

NOTE:—Number of days worked and number of employees taken from Pennsylvania State Report.

This table shows that men working during the year 1921 earned $9.56 for eight hours or about $1.20 per hour, while the rate for workmen in building state roads is only 30 cents an hour.

Mr. Shillingford said that if the coal consuming public were willing to pay $9.56 for eight hours work, the miners are right in this fight. If they believe that wages in the mining industry ought to be based upon a parity with wages in other industries, the operators are right.

The statement made by the representative of District No. 2, United Mine Workers of America, before the

Absenteeism-Tonnage Workers 17.6% Day Men 8.8%

Labor Committee of the House of Representatives, that $760 was the annual earnings of miners in this District last year, is absolutely untrue and the witness admitted on the stand that this figure did not include wages paid for day labor, which is 35% of the total cost, cutting and scraping, pushing cars, yardage and deadwork or extra pay for deficiencies.

On the matter of intermittency of employment, Mr. Shillingford said: The principal reason given by the United Mine Workers of America for the maintenance of the war-wage scale and their demand for a six hour day and a five day week, is intermittency and absorbed by the mines that had made the necessary wage adjustments. It is an admitted fact that the coal mining industry is overdeveloped and over-manned. The question of overdevelopment is a matter of individual investment and the exercise of the American right to enter into any legitimate business which the operation of natural economic laws will adjust.

The excess number of men employed in the mining industry is due in a large measure to the very high wages paid in the coal mines of the country as compared with the wages paid in other industry employing such a large percentage of common labor, thereby attracting men to the industry.

In 1920 the maximum production of coal loads in one day was 45-47. The average maintained for the year was 33,091 car loads, based on 300 working days in the year. If the maximum production of one day's capacity, 45,457 had been maintained we would have produced over 740,000,000 tons of bituminous coal, and the actual possible production of bituminous coal in the United States, so far as development and equipment are concerned, is in the neighborhood of 750,000,000 tons of coal. Man power is ca-public of 675,000,000 tons based upon performance of October, 1919. Present transportation facilities, however limit this to less than 600,000,000 tons. This is agreed to by many men who have made a study of the industry. Intermittency of employment in the coal mining industry cannot be eliminated by maintaining a wage rate so high that men can make as much money as in other industries in one half the number of working days.

It is an economic fallacy to insist upon intermittency of employment in the bituminous coal mining industry as a reason for extra high wage rates. The requirement is for coal mining wage rates to be based upon the factors that rightfully should enter into the employment of men in any industry, that is the skill required, the hazard, the health risk, general living conditions in and around the plant, and the advantages or lack of advantages offered to the worker's family, etc., in comparison with like things in other and kindred industries. If these factors are balanced with other and kindred industries, the coal mining industry will be put out of the class of competitively bidding for men and attracting them from other

New York, N. Y., April 14.—Yeggmen today crossed the dead line proscribed by the New York police and blew open a safe in a down town office building. The watchman was tied up in a sack and thrown into a corner while the gang looted the safe. The robbers then went to the Royal Insurance building, going from office to office looting the desks and safes.

New York, April 14.—George Bainbridge, night watchman of the Royal Insurance Building, who was found bound and gagged early today, apparently by bandits who looted safes in the building of more than $50,000, confessed to the police that he had aided the robbers. Yeggs operating in co-operation with the watchman worked the big office building below the dead line established by the police and secured considerable loot from safes and desks.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 14.—Three bandits today held up the Max Kurgan jewelry store here and escaped with loot valued at $150,000. Two of the robbers covered clerks with revolvers while the third looted the safe which was unlocked.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 14.—The trout season will open tomorrow in Pennsylvania and it will be one of the best in years, according to Nathan R. Buller, Commissioner of Fisheries. The waters of the State are in good condition and many of the trout streams have been restocked during the last few years.

"DRY NAVY" CAPTURES BRITISH SCHOONER WITH LARGE CARGO OF WHISKEY ON BOARD

New York, N. Y., April 14.—A British schooner was overhauled and seized by a police motor boat patrol in the bay off 69th Street today. Twenty-five barrels of rye whiskey and hundreds of bottles of Scotch were on board. Although sailing under an assumed name "Schooner Red," the vessel proved to be the "W. T. Dodd," of British registry, from Nassau. Its Captain, Herman Hadley, said he was bound for St. Pierre, Canada.

ATTORNEY GENERAL DAUGHERTY REPORTS ENCOURAGING DEVELOPMENTS IN STRIKE

Washington, D. C. April 14.—Encouraging developments in the coal strike situation were reported to President Harding today by Attorney General Daugherty. There are indications that efforts are being made in the various fields to get the miners and operators together for a settlement, Daugherty said, after a lengthy conference with the President. While he could report no really concrete action looking toward a settlement, he feels that encouraging progress is being made.

FIVE LIVES LOST WHEN SCHOONER GOES TO BOTTOM OF POTOMAC RIVER IN GALE

Alexandria, Va., April 14.—Five lives were lost when the forty ton schooner "S. C. Kemble" sank in a gale in the Potomac river one mile below here today. Mrs. Gertrude Lawrence, aged 45, wife of the captain of the vessel, and her four children, ranging in age from seven to sixteen, were trapped in the cabin and went down with the vessel. Captain Lawrence and his fourteen year old son Carroll saved themselves by clinging to the rigging.

industries. The mines in the United States when just sufficiently manned to retain the requirements of this country, which have never exceeded 579,000,000 tons, would work as regularly so far as number of days is concerned as any other basic industry, because bituminous coal mining follows closely and accurately the conditions existing in all other industries. The bituminous coal mining industry, if properly balanced, must necessarily work the average number of "coal consumption days" worked in all other industries because it supplies all other industries with a basic commodity, fuel.

Though coal mining is hazardous, it is not unpleasant, instead it is an agreeable occupation. Coal mines today are better ventilated than large city office buildings. Sixty-four per cent of the men employed in Central Pennsylvania mines are contract miners and are, to all practical intent and purpose, their own "bosses." They have and exercise the freedom of coming to work at their own will, leaving their places of work when they desire, lying idle on any day they wish and are practically master in their own working place. In no other large industry is this great amount of freedom enjoyed by the workmen. This is a reason why men like coal mining and persist in remaining coal miners in the face of intermittency of employment. Another important reason is that in other industries when business depression occurs, the usual procedure is to lay off or furlough these workmen who are not necessary to produce the decreased output and these employees are forced to secure work in other plants or other industries, or take their places in the ranks of the unemployed, while in the mining industry this condition does not obtain. If a mine has only 50 per cent orders, instead of laying off 50 per cent of its men and running six days a week, the 100 per cent employees work 50 per cent time, or three days in the week. If it is only a half time operation in the mining industry, all those engaged in that industry are permitted to earn the "half loaf" which is considered better than none. In addition the mining industry at such times is willing and is forced to give work to many of the men out of employment in other lines of industry. In our own district during the year 1921, when other large industries laid off thousands of men, hundreds of these unemployed found their way into the different coal mines and took their share of whatever work was to be had at the particular mine where they found employment. This condition of selfishness in the mining industry is one of its bright spots. The operators do not wish to change it, and the mine workers would not permit it to be changed. This fact, also, let us add, is not known by the general public and has never been recognized by short sighted labor leaders. Mine workers may be employed part time, but the only miners totally unemployed are those located where the mines in the community are totally idle and they are unable to move to some other town where a mine or mines are in operation. Such cases are the exception to the rule.

The miners are asking the public to subsidize them by paying them as much wages for 150 working days in the year as is paid to the workers of other and kindred industries for 300 days' work. The public must not be asked to pay the inflated cost due to such a fallacious method of determining wages. When wage rates in the bituminous coal mining field are based upon the proper factors and have found a proper relationship to the wages in other industries, the excess number of men in the mining district will be depleted by the operation of economic law, which is the proper way to bring on this condition.

Intermittency in the mining industry could be reduced and practically eliminated by the ruthless exercise of the right to reduce the working force in proportion to diminishing production as it is exercised in other industries.

Cats Once Worshipped.

After the Romans conquered Egypt, they, with their usual sagacity, tolerated cat love or worship. Diodorus tells the story of a mob tearing a Roman soldier "to pieces" because he had accidentally slain a cat. An office of keeper of cats was hereditary. The Turks adopted Fella domestication. In Cairo homeless cats were fed by order of the kadin. According to Lane, the translator of the Arabian Nights, the Sultan Ez-Zahir Beybars, founded a home for cats in a garden near his mosque.

Light Without Heat.

One of the things which inventors would like much to accomplish is the production of light without heat. Nature proves by the example of the firefly and the glowworm that the thing can be done. Experiments made abroad have shown what had long been believed without direct measurement of the temperature that the light radiated from a Geissler tube, when an electric current passes through it, is accompanied by very little heat. This accords with the view that we must look to electricity for a solution of the problem of "cold light."

Patagonia.

Patagonia consists of the territories of Rio Negro, Chubut and Santa Cruz in Argentina. Formerly Patagonia was applied to the whole southern portion of South America. The name may be derived from the Spanish word patagon, meaning a large foot, alluding to the footprints found by early explorers, or it may come from the Quichua word patacuna meaning terraces.

The National Security League is making plans for the fitting celebration of the 100th anniversary of Gen. Grant's birth, which falls on April 27. The Grant centenary serves to recall a visit General Grant made to our neighboring county of Elk, just across the Clearfield county line, where he was royally entertained by some Elk county friends on a deer hunting expedition. The General spent several days at a hunting camp where much shooting and popping occurred—in the camp. When the party was about to break up some fellow discovered that the President of the United States had not had much success thus far as a deer hunter, in fact hadn't seen a deer yet, and remembering that a farmer named English, living nearby, had a tame buck deer, heeled it out of the camp, purchased the deer and had it taken to the vicinity of the camp, where it was suddenly driven out of the brush along the road in front of the hero of Appomattox and General Grant brought it down with a well-directed rifle shot. The village near which the President camped was named Grant after its distinguished visitor. It is located handy to Dent's Run.

W. O. Altman, famous weather prognosticator, hunter and trapper, has written a letter from his home in the wildwoods near Westline to a friend in Kane in which he warns folks in this section to keep close to overcoats for they are liable to need them all summer. It is going to be the coldest summer since 1879 and from April 15 to August, he says look for rain, snow and cold winds. He says his reckonings from March 21, 22 and 23.

"Mother's Day" will soon be at hand, and those in touch with the movement in the cities advise against the wearing of the accustomed carnation, because they say, the florists are profiteering and boost the price of flowers on that day out of all reason. It was ever thus.

Couldn't Stand That.

When I was a youngster we lived on a farm, and as my parents were devout church members the preachers and their families were always welcome to come at any time. I had quite a case on the preacher's youngest son, a lad of ten years. One day they all drove into the yard just as dinner was ready. Well, my brothers and I had to "wait" while the preacher's family ate dinner with the older folks. And I hungrily watched my young love eat six plates of chicken—and there was none left for us. That cured me.—Exchange.

Paris an Ancient City.

The name Paris as applied to the town first occurred in a synodal letter convening a council there in A. D. 300. The city is first mentioned in history under the name of Lutetia by Julius Caesar in 53 B. C., when he appointed it as the meeting place of deputies from conquered Gaul. It was then the fourth capital of the Parisii, an insignificant Gallic tribe.

Gipsies in History.
The original gipsies appeared in Europe at about the beginning of the sixteenth century. It is probable that they were of Indian origin and were either exiled because of their religious beliefs or ran away from the persecution of Timur, the great conqueror who invaded India. As their origin was a mystery to Europe when they appeared on its Eastern plains, some German savant decreed that they were Egyptians. The popular corruption of the word "Egyptian" is the name by which they are now known the world over.

EASTER GIFT

Easter has come to be a fine time for gift giving and you'll be glad to know that we have always those little gifts that you'd like to make. It isn't a hard task to make selections here at any time.

And now that we approach the time for the giving we want you to feel free to come in and shop. You will not be pressed to buy. We want you to make comparisons. There's only one logical conclusion to that.

W. W. O'Brien

Art and Free Will.
Determinism robs art of its fundamental right to exist—or its autonomous expression. It sweeps individual into the crowd and makes the crowd subservient to inflexible forces. It overlooks man's consciousness of his place in the universe; forgets his temperamental preferences and reduces him to a mechanism through which blind life operates as best it can do to do coöperation. It takes no heed of the teleology which gives art its glorious significance, its imperishable beauty. —Thomas G. Craven, in the Mail.

Get Salt From the Ocean.
Guam has no salt deposits unless the great Pacific ocean which surrounds it can be called upon. All the salt consumed in the island is evaporated from sea water in kettles in the great factories employed by the natives of all the great countries and islands. When a "boiling" is in progress the natives take occasion to produce a quantity of sugar as well as salt, the sugar being derived from evaporating the sap from the coconut tree.

Daily Thought.

Original "Bill of Health."
A bill of health is a certificate issued to the master of a vessel when clearing from a port. When no disease of an infectious nature exists in the port, the bill is known as a clean bill of health; if infectious disease is suspected or there is possibility of such, it is called a suspected bill, while in case of such disease existing it is known as a foul bill. The expression "clean bill of health" is often applied to individuals, who, after a physical examination, are found in perfect health.

Couldn't Stand That.
When I was a youngster we lived on a farm, and as my parents were devout church members the preachers and their families were always welcome to come at any time. I had quite a case on the preacher's young son, a lad of ten years. One day they came into the yard just as dinner was ready. Well, my brothers and I had to wait while the preacher's family ate dinner with the older folks. And I hungrily watched my young love eat six pieces of chicken, and there was none left for us. That cured me. —Exchange.

MISS CLARA LEAVY PASSES AWAY

Clara Leavy daughter of Mrs. E. A. Leavy of Second Street passed away at the Clearfield Hospital about 9 o'clock last evening following an illness of three weeks. Miss Clara suffered an attack of the flu about three weeks ago and was apparently on the road to recovery when she was taken seriously ill and was removed to the Clearfield Hospital for treatment. Her ailment was found to be tubercular meningitis and while medical skill was able to stay the ravages of the disease for a brief while her weakened vitality was unequal to the struggle and the end came as above stated.

The deceased was the daughter of the late Edward A. and Louise Helsey Leavy and was born in Clearfield, on January 17, 1885. Her entire life was spent in Clearfield where she endeavored herself by her sweet, lovable character and disposition to a wide circle of friends. She was not strong physically, but she was a very kind and her disposition was very kind and accented, draw out and develop her many graces. An uncomplaining sufferer at all times, her trials accepted with true christian fortitude, she endeavored by every self sacrificing effort to bring joy and comfort into the hearts of those she loved, and as a result was idolized in her home. Her death in the springtime of life, with everything to live for, is a heart-crushing blow to her mother and sisters, who have in their sorrow, the heartfelt sympathy of all who had the pleasure of this splendid young woman's acquaintance.

The deceased was a lifelong and earnestly devoted member of the Trinity Methodist church and took a great interest in the activities of her church. She is survived by her mother, Mrs. E. A. Leavy, and three sisters, Mrs. John Gundry and Misses Anna and Sarah, all of Clearfield.

The funeral will be held from the Leavy home Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The services will be conducted by Rev. Horace L. Jacobs of the Trinity Church and interment will be made in Hillcrest Cemetery.

The stork visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gray this morning at 9:12 and left a big eight-pound baby boy, which has been named Robert, Jr. Mother and son doing fine.

Infection and Contagion.
Infecting is the spread of disease through the air, through water or some other distant means. In pathology, infection means the communication of disease as by entrance of pathogenic germs into an organism in any manner; distinguished from contagion, in which direct or indirect contact with a diseased individual is implied. Contagion means the communication of disease from person to person by contact with the body of a diseased person.

Effective Meth Protection.
Chests made of red cedar are ample protection against the operations of the moth. The government says so in a report which comes from the agricultural department. These chests must be secure and tight in every respect. Since it is the odor of the red cedar which kills the young moths, care must be taken to prevent the escape of the odor. This is accomplished by seeing that the joints are all tight, and when there is occasion to open the chest the interior must not be exposed any longer than is absolutely necessary.

Round Chimneys Best.
A round chimney, while not so easy to build as a square one, has decided advantages over the latter, says the Scientific American. It greatly lessens the friction between the walls of the chimney and the rising gases, and has the smallest wall surfaces in proportion to the cross area. The efficiency of a round chimney 24 inches in diameter is almost as great as that of a square chimney 24 inches across.

February.
February, the second month in the modern calendar was not in the Roman year. In the reign of Numa two months were added January at the beginning and February at the end. This arrangement continued to 452 B. C., when it was assigned its present position in the calendar.

Keeps Silver Bright.
In order to keep silver that is not in constant use in a good condition fill a paper with alternate layers of forks, spoons and other objects and common flour that is perfectly dry. If the silver is bright and dry when you put it away it may be used at any time without being cleaned for a year or two. After this time the flour needs drying again. This plan saves a great deal of cleaning.

WHAT ABOUT YOUR KIDDIE?

Is he or she as strong and husky as you would like to see them? There's a way out and that way is to give them plenty of milk with their meals and in between.

CLEARFIELD MILK

This is the milk that the local school authorities are using for the kiddies that are under weight. There's a reason for this selection. It is not only the milk but it's the fact that every care is used to get the milk to the kiddies as pure a milk as can possibly be.

We Want You To Know The Facts

A Statement By The Association of Bituminous Coal Operators of Central Pennsylvania

Hurling invectives at the coal operators of the United States seems to be a popular pastime with the officials of the United Mine Workers of America and its partisans. Ellis Searles, editor of the United Mine Workers' Journal, writing in the Saturday Evening Post of the issue of April 1st in an article entitled "The Coal Miners' Case," starts his decidedly partisan explanation of the strike and its causes with this paragraph:

"Members of the United Mine Workers of America were unable to understand the amazing action of the bituminous coal operators in refusing to meet with them in joint conference for the purpose of negotiating a new wage agreement to take the place of the agreement that expired on March 31, this year. The operators were in honor bound to meet with the miners, and their refusal to meet was a direct, flagrant violation of the solemn agreement, which miners and operators, by command of the government, signed in New York on March 31, 1920. Not all of the operators were guilty of this violation, however. The refusal to meet with the miners was confined to that element among the operators that appears to be determined to destroy the coal miners' union if possible, or at least to weaken its protective influence."

Mr. Searles in the final sentence of the above paragraph gives the union operators of District No. 2 a clean bill of health, but what about the members of the U. M. W. of A. of District No. 2? The union operators of this district invited the miners' representatives to a wage conference and that invitation was firmly refused despite a custom of over 20 years' standing that brought the union miners and operators of District No. 2 into conference prior to the expiration of each scale agreement for the formation and adoption of a new scale. And furthermore in direct violation of their contract the miners of this district quit work April 1st when their wage agreement of April 26, 1920, bound them to continue work for a period of 30 days after the first meeting of operators and miners for the purpose of negotiating a new wage agreement.

Is Mr. Searles able to understand "the amazing action" of the U. M. W. of A. of District No. 2? Does the violation of 22 years' precedent by the U. M. W. of A. of this district in refusing to meet the operators to discuss a new wage agreement, and their strike in direct violation of their contract strike Mr. Searles as a "direct flagrant violation of the solemn agreement" which miners and operators of District No. 2 entered into on April 26, 1920?

If in the paragraph from Mr. Searles' article, reprinted above, "Members of the Operators' Association of District No. 2" were substituted where "Members of the United Mine Workers of America" appears and the word "operators" for "miners" placed throughout the remainder of the paragraph a clear-cut presentation of the situation in this district would be presented.

Mr. John L. Lewis, President of the international body, United Mine Workers of America, recently appeared before the Labor Committee of the lower house of Congress and, after reading a clause in the agreement which expired March 31st, which pledged the operators of the Central Competitive Field to a joint conference with the miners, said in part:

"It was a pledge as morally binding as any bond or promissory note ever executed in a business transaction. The mine workers believed the coal operators signed the agreement in good faith. But now we find that they contumaciously refused to live up to their agreement. They have refused point blank to do as they agreed to do. If they were to refuse to liquidate their financial obligations it would be no more dishonorable than their refusal to keep their solemn agreement with the mine workers."

If Mr. Lewis so regards the action of the operators of the Central Competitive Field, of which District No. 2 is not a part, should he not hold the same views of the U. M. W. of A., District No. 2? The pledge of the miners' organization in this district to keep its members at work 30 days after the initial meeting of operators and miners for the consideration of a new scale agreement was "a pledge as morally binding as any bond or promissory note ever executed in a business transaction." The operators of this district asked the miners' scale committee to meet them in joint conference as they had for 23 years past. The refusal of the miners was "point blank." Does Mr. Lewis condone in the U. M. W. of A. in District No. 2, the same actions for which he condemns in extravagant language a few of the operators of the Central Competitive Field?

The refusal of the miners' organization in this field to meet with us in joint conference to formulate and adopt a new wage agreement to supplement that which expired March 31, 1922; the fact that non-union operators with whom we must compete in the open market have reduced wages to almost a pre-war level, whose prices we must meet or get out of business, and whose prices we must meet to give the miner his fair share of work days, has compelled us to formulate the following offer or scale of wages, which was posted at the mines of the members of this association, April 1, 1922, and effective on that date:

London has one-cent cigars. So have we, but they cost more than that.

Why not spend more on public works and less on public workers?

A bald-headed man with wire whiskers can't see anything so very wonderful about nature.

Every married man knows a stitch in time is a surprise.

Safety in Front.
The late long-staple cotton crop has made quite a lot of money for South Carolina negroes. A short time ago one of them purchased a high-priced car. A few days later he went back to the salesman. "Cap, is you got any of dese here cow-ketchers?" he inquired. "Do you mean buxipers, Charlie?" "Yassir." "Well, Charlie, do you want one for both ends of your car?" "Nawstr, cap, ahnt nobody gwine ter ketch up wid me. Ahf Ias want one for de front."

Gold and Silver in Coal.
In the Catabria coal field of Wyoming small quantities of gold and silver are said to be present in the coal veins. In South Africa a similar occurrence has been noted, the coal occurring in seams running through the quartzite ore.

Restaurant French.
Landed on a lunch bill of fare by T. M. C. "Horseshoe d'oeuvre." This reminds us of the story of the young man in New York who was dining in a first-class restaurant with his best beloved. She was poring over the menu wondering what to order when he put in, "What you want to start with, denrie, is some of those horse doves."—Boston Transcript.

Walking.
If a man is walking, it is the first principle of philosophy to say that he is not walking, the first principle of science to say that he is placing one foot before the other and bringing the hinder one in turn to the fore, the first principle of art to say that the man is more than walking, he is yearning; then there are times when scientist, philosopher and poet all discover of a sudden that by heavens! the man is walking and none other.—Kenneth Burke, in the Dial.

Costly Debauch.
One of the calamities of medieval England was directly due to over-indulgence in liquor. Henry's son and heir, William, was to sail from France on the White Ship. The Norman sailors got drunk just before they started for England, and the vessel was lost with all on board. It was a costly debauch, for by removing Henry's only male heir it opened the way for a civil war over the succession when he was no more.

Light Without Heat.
One of the things which inventors would like much to accomplish is the production of light without heat. Nature proves by the example of the firefly and the glowworm that the thing can be done. Experiments made abroad have shown what had long been believed without direct measurement of the temperature that the light radiated from a Geissler tube, when an electric current passes through it, is accompanied by very little heat. This accords with the view that we must look to electricity for a solution of the problem of "cold light."

Vote by Seniority.

getting at him any worse than it already had, and as we were taking him out the blanket slipped aside from his face and I saw who it was that the master-mechanic had risked his life

for. It was Hatch, himself, and he died in our arms, the major's and mine, while we were carrying him out to where Mrs. Sheila was tearing one of the Pullman sheets that I had got hold of into strips to make bandages for the wounded.

With the chance of saving maybe another one or two, we couldn't stay to help the brave little woman who was trying to be doctor and nurse to half a dozen poor wretches at once. But she took time to ask me one single breathless question:

"Have they found him yet?—you know the one I mean, Jimmie?"

"No," I said. "They're digging away at that side now," and then I ran back to jump in again.

Though the fire was now licking at everything in sight, Kirgan, who had taken the ax from our fireman, had managed to cut some of the car timbers out of the way so that we could see down into the tangle of things where the cab of the 416 ought to have been. There wasn't much left of the cab. The water-gauge was broken, along with everything else, but in spite of the reek of smoke and steam we could see that Hogan and his fireman were not there. But down under the coal that had shifted forward at the impact of the collision we could make out the other man—the murderer—lying on his back, black in the face and gasping.

That was enough for the boss. It looked like certain death for anybody to crawl down into that hissing steam-bath, but he did it, wriggling through the hole that Kirgan had chopped, while two or three of us ran to the little creek that trickled down on the far side of the "Y" and brought back soaking Pullman blankets to try to delay the encroaching fire and smother the steam-jets.

I couldn't see very well what the boss was doing; the smoke and steam were so blinding. But when I did get a glimpse I saw that he was digging frantically with his bare hands at the shifted coal, and that he had succeeded in freeing the head and shoulders of the buried man, who was still alive enough to choke and gasp in the furnace-like heat.

Kirgan stood at as long as he could—until the licking flames were about to drive us all away.

"You'll be burnt alive—come up out of that!" he yelled to the boss; but I knew it wouldn't do any good. With Collingwood still buried down there and still with the breath of life in him, the boss was going to stay and keep on trying to dig him out, even if he, himself, got burned to a crisp doing it. Loving Mrs. Sheila the way he did, he couldn't do any less.

It was awful, those next two or three minutes. We were all running frantically back and forth, now, between the wreck and the creek, soaking the blankets and doing our level best to beat the fire back and keep it from cutting off the only way there was for the boss to climb out. But we could only fight gaspingly on the surface of things, as you might say. Down underneath, the fire was working around in front and behind in spite of all we could do. Some of it had got to the coal, and the heavy sulphurous smoke was oozing up to make us all choke and strangle.

Honestly, you couldn't have told that the boss was a white man when he crawled up out of that pit of death, tugging and lifting the crushed and broken body of the madman, and making us take it before he would come out himself. We got them both away from the fire as quickly as we could and around to the other side of things, Kirgan and Jones carrying

Collingwood.

The poor little lady we had left alone with the rescued ones had done all she could, and she was waiting for us. When we put Collingwood down, she sat down on the ground and took his head in her lap and cried over him just like his mother might have, and when the boss knelt down beside her I heard what he said: "That's right, little woman; that's just as it should be. Death wipes out all scores. I did my best—you must always believe that I did my best."

She choked again at that, and said: "There is no hope?" and he said: "I'm afraid not. He was dying when I got to him."

I tried to swallow the big lump in my throat and turned away, and so did everybody else but the major, who went around and knelt down on the other side of Mrs. Sheila. The wreck was blazing now like a mighty bonfire, lighting up the place-clad hills all around and snapping and growling like some savage monster glouglouing over its prey. In the red glow we saw a man limping up the track from the west, and Kirgan and I went to meet him. It was Hogan, the missing engineer of the 416.

He told us what there was to tell, which wasn't very different from the way we'd been putting it up. They—Hogan and his fireman—hadn't suspected that they were carrying a maniac until after they had passed Bauxite and Collingwood had told them both that what he wanted to do was to overtake the special and smash it. Then there had been a fight on the engine, but Collingwood had a gun and he had threatened to kill them both if they didn't keep on.

"I kept her going," said the Irishman, "thinkin' maybe Jones'd keep out of my way, or that at the last I'd get a chance to shut the 'Sixteen off an' give her the brake. He kept me from doin' it, and when I saw the tail-lights, I pushed Johnnie Shovel off an' went

Just then Jones, the special's engineer, came up, and he placed out Hogan's story. The wire to Bauxite had warned him that a crazy man was chasing him, and overrunning stop-signals. He had thought to side-track the chaser at the old "Y" and that was what he had stopped for.

Thereupon the three of us went after the crippled fireman, and when we got back to the "Y" with him it was all over. Collingwood had died with his head in Mrs. Sheila's lap, and the boss, fagged out and half dead as he must have been, was up and at work, getting the wreck victims into our day coach, which had been backed up and taken around to the other leg of the "Y" to head for Port City.

When it came time for us to move Collingwood, Mrs. Sheila pulled her veil down and walked behind the body, with the good old major locking his arm in hers, and that choking lump came again in my throat when I remembered what Collingwood had said to the boss the night he came to our office: "Sheila made her wedding journey with me once, when she was just eighteen. The next time she rides with me it will be at my funeral."

I guess there's no use stretching the agony out by telling about that mournful ride back to Port City with the dead and wounded. We left the wreck blazing and roaring in the shut-in valley at the gulch's mouth because there wasn't anything else to do; Kirgan and Jones and one of the firemen handled the engine and pulled out, while the rest of us rode in the day-coach and did what we could for the suffering.

At Banta we made a stop long enough to let the boss send a wire to Port City, turning out the doctors and the ambulances—and the undertakers; and though it was after three o'clock in the morning when we pulled in, it seemed as if the whole town had got the word and was down at the station to meet us.

I couldn't see Mrs. Sheila's face when the major helped her off at the platform; her veil was still down. But I did hear her low-spoken words to the boss, whispered while they were carrying Collingwood and Hatch, and two of the others, who were past help, out to the waiting string of dead-wagons.

"I shall go east with the body tomorrow—today, I mean—if the strikers will let you run a train, and Cousin Basil will go with me. We may never meet again, Graham, and for that reason I must say what I have to say now. Your opportunity has come. The man who could do the most to defeat you is dead, and the strike will do the rest. If I were you, I should neither eat nor sleep until I had thought of some way to take the railroad out of the hands of those who have proved that they are not worthy to own it."

I didn't know, just then, how much or little attention Mr. Norcross was paying to this mighty good, clear-headed bit of business advice. What he said went back to that saying of hers that they might never meet again.

"We must meet again—sometime and somewhere," he said. And then: "I did my best. God knows I did my best, Sheila. I would have given my own life gladly if the giving would have saved Collingwood's. Don't you believe that?"

"I shall always believe that you are one of God's own gentlemen, Graham," she said, soft and low, and then the major came to take her away.

Horse Racing 900 Years Ago.
Horse racing in England is said to have been first established at Chester in the year 1000.

Londoners Go to Bed Early.

How early we go to bed in London is shown by a census of underground passengers. The last trains in various directions carried respectively 45, 18, 19 and 25 passengers. So hard are our war habits to cast off. But, indeed, 10 o'clock was bedtime for a multitude of Londoners even before the war, and in that multitude were, and are, quite a number of prominent business men. Your professional man seems to sit up later, and fashion, naturally, rarely retires till dawn.—London Times Weekly.

Part of Time's Heritage.

Somewhere Shelley's line in "Adonais" about one whose name was writ in water comes to mind while reading the announcement that a fossil brownstone slab bearing the imprint of raindrops has been presented to the geological museum of Trinity college. This was a ruin that occurred thousands and thousands of years ago, and yet the marks of it are still to be seen. Like the lascious, ever-vital personality of John Keats, these raindrops have become part of the heritage of Time.—Christian Science Monitor.

That Small Eoy.

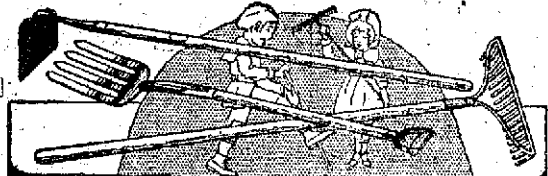

Just as the train was about to start, a very stout man struggled into a carriage and sank into a seat, breathing heavily. A small boy who sat opposite appeared to be fascinated. His ardent gaze eventually began to annoy the fat man, who demanded angrily: "What are you staring at me for?" "Please, sir," replied the lad, "there's nowhere else to look."—York Post.

Philosophic Solemnity.

How does Nature deity us with a few cheap elements? Give me health and a day, and I will make the pomp of emperors ridiculous.—Emerson.

Limited Knowledge.

"What kind of people are those who have just moved in next door to you?" asked Mrs. Gadder. "Oh, I never talk about my neighbors," replied Mrs. Herdson. "All I know about them is that their stuff came in one load, that only one of the bedsteads has any brass on it, most of the furniture looks old, there's six in the family, the children are all boys, they have two dogs, the man is about twenty years older than the woman, they had a squabble with the driver of the van when they settled with him and their name is Smith."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

NASH FOUR

Nash Leads the World in Motor Car Value

Four Touring, $985

PERHAPS no other single feature of the Nash Four has inspired so much favorable comment as the remarkable riding comfort with which it is endowed.

The reason for the surpassing ease with which it travels the roughest roads goes straight back to the new-type Nash springs, which are formed of one great masterleaf, an increased number of scientifically graduated thinner and more flexible leaves, and a rebound plate that, in effect, forms a cushion between the body of the car and the rushing recoil from a road blow.
